

We have been informed by those who have knowledge in the field of human behavior, that the first few years of life are in some ways the most significant. Every child should be a "wanted" child and the degree to which a child is wanted is reflected in personality behavior in future years — particularly in the matter of self-image.

I was born on the 28th day of January in the ^{year} 1907 in La Grange, Illinois. Between this time and the birth of my sister, Esther Linnea Johnson on March 12th, 1912, in Menasha, Wisconsin, I was an only child. Whether or not I was a "wanted" child in the fullest meaning of that word, I do not know. I do know that home was always "home" to me, and the love wrestled all my life with a sense of inadequacy and an almost total lack of self-confidence. I am sure that the fault does not lie here. Both brother & Dad were committed to the Christian faith and both were individuals of the highest moral integrity.

A strong bond of affection existed between me and my father. I respected him for the uprightness of his life. Never did I see him swerve in any habit or action which I could not approve of. And I loved him much. He had a great love for children, and children loved him. The feeling of loving warmth lingers as I recollect the many times I would as a child ~~else~~ crawl into his lap and sit there awhile.

Mother had immigrated from Sweden as a child of eleven. Born on ~~the~~^{the} 1st of five sisters to Johan Anderson and Anna Louisa Peterson in 1881 (or 1882) in Skarne, Sweden, she was chosen with her sister, Ellen, to go to America when economic conditions in Sweden made it most difficult for her mother to keep the family together. Her father had died in 1858 leaving his wife with five girls to raise. Mother & Ellen came to Rockford to stay with an uncle, brother to her mother.

The years following my birth in 1897 must have been difficult. My parents, in a deep desire to own a bit of land and raise their family on a farm, purchased a small farm near Little Falls, Minnesota.

But farming was difficult with three consecutive summers of drought. In 1911 my family moved to Kenosha, Wisconsin where my father secured employment with the H. B. Jeffrey company, later Nash Motors and then American Motors.
Ella, my sister, was born in March 12 1912.

So it is that Kenosha, Wisconsin, was to be my home town until after high school graduation. Two protestant Swedish speaking churches, the Lutheran and the Baptist, ministered to the small Swedish community in Kenosha. My parents attended the Swedish Baptist church where they joined the congregation and attended regularly. Swedish was the language used by the congregation. Many are the Swedish sermons I listened to as a child and I learned the theological vocabulary of the Bible so well that these terms still linger with me. I remember often going through my father's pockets ^{at the end of a long day at work} to find his watch or some other item to fiddle. It helped to pass the time away. We as a family always sat in the same church pews -

Sunday after Sunday, the Third pew from the back on the left hand side.

The commitment of our family to the church was total. Pupils in our Sunday School who attended faithfully with a minimum of seven absences for the year were given a diploma as a reward the first year, and a seal for their diploma the next six years if they were faithful in their attendance. I still possess my diploma with its six seals, representing seven consecutive years of constant S. S. attendance.
Some cold wintry days Father would take us thru the snow drifts to church, sometimes pulling my sister on the sled.
We did not own an automobile, we walked wherever we went, as did most everyone else.

We never had so-called family devotions in our home, but grace at mealtime was standard. The church and our pastor were always given total and whole-hearted support. Never were either criticized in the talk Sunday noon nor in family conversation. Father did serve on the Deacon Board of the church but he was never a so-called "leader" in the church's life. Yet none were more faithful in the support of the church. In the years when Pentecostalism was influencing so many Christians, leading to many so-called splits in Protestant Church, our congregation suffered along with so many others. But when some members left the congregation to form another, Dad would not go with them. His commitment was to his own church and pastor.

Ester grew, as I did, in loving respect to the church and to the things of God. She was gifted with a fair degree of musical talent, studying the piano and arriving at a good degree of proficiency in her playing. She was often used in the worship service of the church, and in her high school years played the pipe organ for the congregational services. I had spent a little time in the study of the violin. Many were the hours we spent playing together, Ester and I. Happy hours they were. And what pleasure they afforded our parents, also, who loved to hear us make music.

The memories of school days seem to be all but black-out for me. While we lived in Little Falls, Swedish was the language in our home and I have been told that I knew very little English when I began school. I was four when we moved to Kenosha. But English became very quickly the language of our home life in Kenosha. Mother, particularly, became very adept at reading and writing. She carried on an extensive correspondence with many friends and her family in Sweden. Many have spoken of the encouragements received from her letters.

Both Esther & I attended Bee School in Kenosha for our first six grades, Lincoln Jr. H. for the next three, and Kenosha High School, graduating in 1925 and 1930. I have no remembrance of being a so-called "leader" in school. Rather, it seems, I was an average student and a quiet unaggressive lad. I don't remember having any "fights". I do remember breaking off from one which I was being encouraged to tackle by other classmates. As I remember it, there wasn't any real reason to fight. It had no wrongs to right, no grievances to avenge no hatred for my usual opponent.

Has this been a fatal flaw in my character — the lack of aggressiveness?
There have been many conflicts in life but they have been inner conflicts, contented with in the lonely hours. By God's grace there has been little confontation in the years of public ministry. We have served in peace amongst our congregations, and have left each in peace.

Our home was not characterized by a worldly sophisticated atmosphere or appearance. My parents purchased a ^{brick} house on the south west side of Kenosha. There was no furnace in the home nor inside bathrooms. These were added later. The wood stove in the kitchen served for heat and for cooking.
An anthracite burning heater ^{located in the living room} provided heat for the rest of the house. Cold has always bothered me from my earliest years. But what was lacking in warmth in the house was compensated for by warm clothing, warm bedding, and by warmed bricks for our sleeping comfort.

Following H.S. graduation, the traditional thing was to "look for a job". Very few H.S. grads from our school would go on to seek a college education. It was hard by thought of for the children of factory workers in the mid 30's. And so I applied for a job at what was then the Nash Motors Company and was employed in the Sunday department as it was called. Here it was that auto parts were shipped to distributors around the country. In the Sunday dept. we packaged and mail the wanted parts. It was a job at which I learned to identify ~~the~~ many of the parts used in the manufacture of an automobile. Later, when it was learned that I could type, I was given the job of typing bills of lading and express bills.

But I worked for Nash Motors for a year but became restless and as the fall season began to approach, I began to think of further schooling. I applied to Lawrence College in Appleton, Wisconsin — but somehow received no necessary confirmation of acceptance. It was then that a layman of our church, St. Ambrose Mahoney, spoke to me of taking a

Years Study at Moody Bible Institute.
The line of reasoning was that I have a whole life before me. Would it not be good to give one year to prepare in a spiritual way for the years ahead - one year given to the study of Bible Word, to the strengthening of my faith and to prepare for service in my home church as a Christian by name.

It seemed good reasoning and since Lawrence College seemed closed for me, I applied to M.B.I. and became a "Moody Student", remaining there for three years until graduation in August 1929.

The three years at M.B.I. were years of joyful maturing in my life.
The study of the Scriptures, the life shared with kindred hearts and the personal life of faith which we learned to live there are memories I am thankful for.
Most of the Christian leaders of the day visited M.B.I. I remember hearing Dr. G. Campbell Morgan preach in the Moody church on North Ave & Clark Street, a church which had been built and completed a year or two before I began studies at H.B.S.

The pastor, Dr. Peter Philpot preached on Sundays in such a manner honored manners that he has always seemed to be my ideal pastor, & attended the last class that Dr. A. A. Torrey taught before his death. Dr. James R. Gray gave us our diplomas at graduation time.

Theological liberalism was becoming more & more entrenched on the American scene in the 30's. Fundamentalism was in its infancy. The Bryan - Scopes so-called "Monkey Trial" was held in Tennessee in the mid 30's. At H.B.S. we were conscious of these trends and were urged and taught to "contend earnestly for the faith".

Teaching at H.B.S. was by in doctrinal. The Bible was the authoritative source of doctrine and practice. Graduating from H.B.S. meant that tho we were not widely educated, we did know the Bible quite well and we were confident in what we believed. That confidence has never left me thru 4 years of further study.

Through the so-called "Practical work department" at N.B.S. students were exposed to all types of service experiences: I.A. teaching, song leading, speaking, ministering in jails and hospitals and preaching on street corners. I think of myself as being very shy, a characteristic which was somewhat overcome as I fulfilled these assignments. It was however, never fully overcome and ^{the} fear of facing people has never left me, despite the years of preaching to my congregation.

Music has always been a very special interest. At N.B.S. I graduated in the Bible-Music course. I remember with much satisfaction our classes in sight-reading and in composition taught by such teachers as T. A. Bittlesper and Mr. Hesgworth. It was my privilege to have my entry to the class song competition chosen, ~~The Star Spangled Banner~~ and gave me the honor of leading the class song at the graduation exercises —
